Strategic Brand Management

Prof. Arijit Bhattacharya
IBS Mumbai

Strategic Brand Management

- Sustaining a brand's value over time.
  - Managing a brand through its life cycle
  - Ensuring it adapts to market changes, consumer behavior shifts and competition
- Relevant and competitive with a loyal customer base.

- Strategies
  - Innovation and continuous improvement
  - Building emotional connections
  - Brand advocacy

Amul
The Taste of India

Branding at Different Stages of Market Evolution

- Emerging Market
- Growth Market
- Mature Market
- Decline Market

Brand Portfolio

- Complete collection of brands owned and managed by a single organization.
  - Strategic arrangement of multiple brands, sub-brands, and product lines to cater to diverse markets, target customer needs, and achieve business goals.
  - To optimize the overall market coverage while minimizing overlaps and conflicts between brands.
- It allows companies to address different price points, customer preferences, and competitive scenarios within their industry.

Types of Brands in a Brand Portfolio

- Flagship Brand: Apple
- Strategic Brand: Samsung Galaxy
- Cash Cow Brand: Maggi for Nestlé India
- Flanker Brand: Diet Coke as a low-calorie alternative to Coca-Cola
- Fighter Brand: Tata Nano

Brand Hierarchy

- Shows how different products, sub-brands, and the main company brand are connected and related.

- To help customers understand
  - What the company stands for (the main brand).
  - What groups of products belong together (sub-brands or categories).
  - What each specific product offers (individual items).

Importance

- Clarity in Communication
  - Helps consumers navigate diverse product portfolios.
  - Creates structured messaging for targeted marketing.
- Efficiency in Marketing
  - Leverages brand equity at various levels.
  - Reduces marketing costs for new product introductions.
- Consumer Loyalty
  - Builds trust and familiarity by associating new products with existing brands.

Levels of Brand Hierarchy

Corporate Brand (Umbrella Brand)

- Represents the entire organization and its identity
- Reflects the company's values, mission, and reputation across all its business area
- Tata

Family Brand

- Group of related products that share common attributes, benefits, or are in the same product category.
- Consistent identity for these products while being distinct from other families within the same organization.
- Tata Motors

Individual Brand

- Specific products marketed under unique names, separate from the corporate/family brand – unique identify
- Designed to cater to particular customer needs
- Tata Nexon

Modifier

- Product variants within an individual brand by attributes - size, flavor, functionality, color, or other features
- Tata Nexon EV

Product Description

- Specific features, functionality, or characteristics of the product that help consumers understand what they are purchasing.
- Tata Nexon EV Max

Sub-brand

- Operates under the umbrella of a parent brand but has its own
  - identity, positioning, and sometimes its own audience or focus.
- Benefits from the parent brand's equity (trust, reputation, and recognition) while also building its own unique attributes.
- Example
  - Apple iPhone, Apple iPad
  - Tata Motors, TCS

Brand Architecture Strategy

Branded House

- where the parent brand (corporate brand) is the dominant identity, and all products or services operate under the same brand name.
- Google
  - Google Maps, Google Drive, Google Translate
- Amul
  - Amul Butter, Amul Milk, Amul Ice Cream

House of Brands

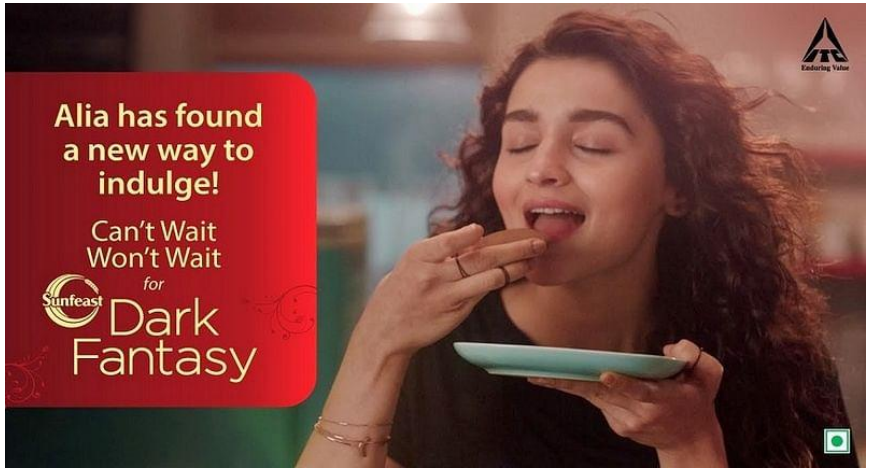
- the parent company owns a portfolio of distinct, independent brands that operate independently and are not explicitly tied to the corporate brand.
- P&G
  - Pampers, Tide, Olay
- ITC
  - Aashirvaad, Sunfeast, Fiama, Classmate

Endorsed Brands

- An endorsed brand is an individual brand that maintains its unique identity but is supported or "endorsed" by a parent brand for credibility and trust.

Hybrid Brand Architecture

- A hybrid model combines elements of both a branded house and a house of brands.
- It is used when some products need strong independent branding, while others benefit from association with the corporate brand.



Master Brand

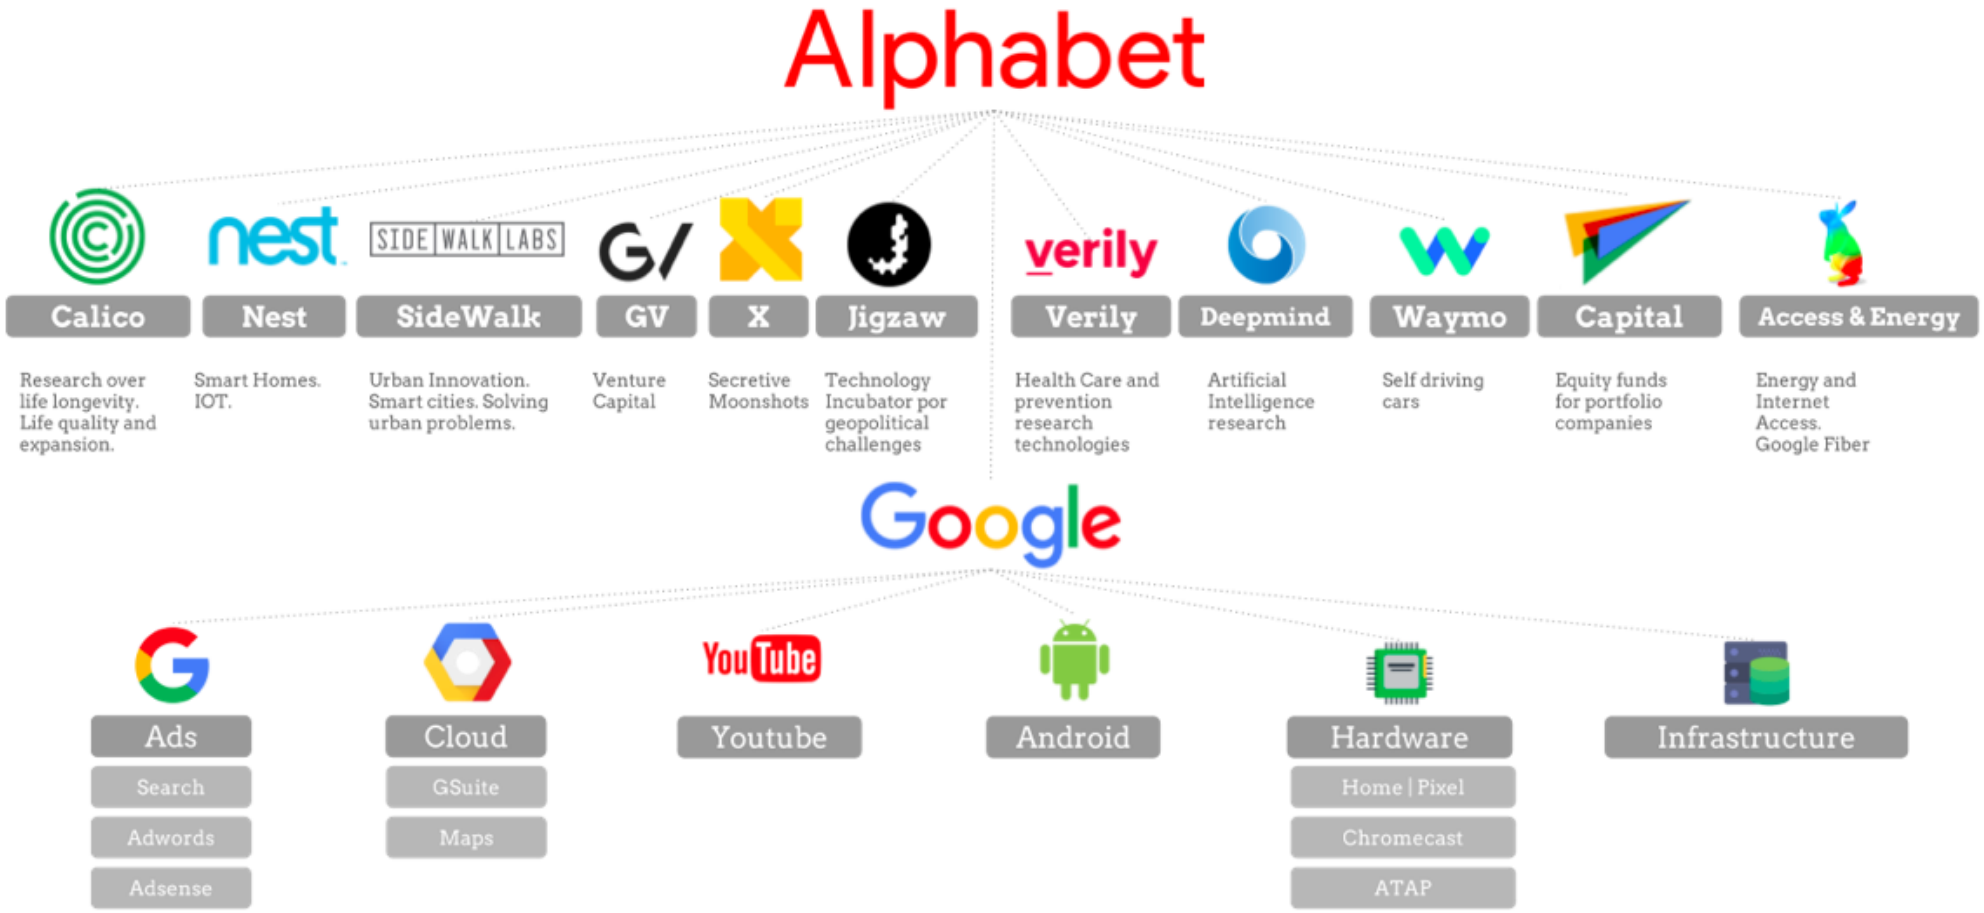
- A dominant brand name that serves as the primary identifier for all products in the portfolio.
- Often synonymous with the company itself.

Sub-brands vs. Line Extensions

Brand Architecture Evaluation and Realignment

- Periodic reviewing the brand architecture to ensure it aligns with market conditions, consumer preferences, and business goals.
- For adapting to market changes.

Brand Architecture Realignment



Private Labels

- Products branded and sold exclusively by a retailer under their own name.

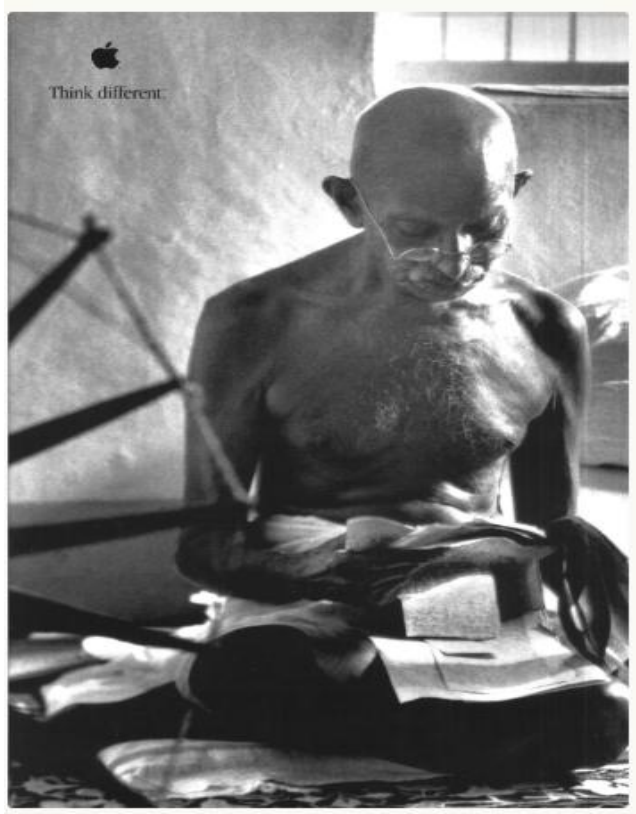
avaasa

Co-Branding

- Two brands collaborate to create a product or service, leveraging each other's equity

Brand Re-Launch

- Repositioning a brand that is dying or underperforming, often through changes in branding, marketing, or product offerings.

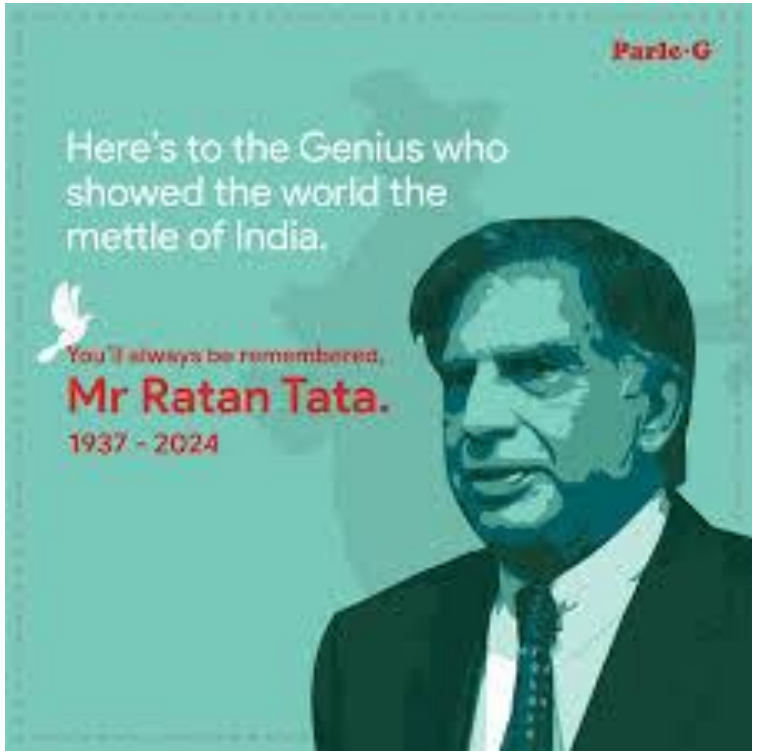


Maggi

#WeMissYouToo

Brand Rejuvenation

Revitalizing an existing brand to make it relevant again, focusing on updating its image or messaging without completely changing its identity.



Campa

Campa
We're all in it together
for the fun of it,
for the taste of it!
CAMPA ORANGE FLAVOUR - IT'S THE FLAVOUR OF FUN!

SINCE 1972
Campa
COLA
2L
LIME & LE
2L
ORANGE
2L

Key Differences Between Brand Re-Launch and Brand Rejuvenation

Aspect	Brand Re-Launch	Brand Rejuvenation
Scope	A complete overhaul and reintroduction.	Refreshing and modernizing elements.
Timing	When the brand is failing or discontinued.	When the brand is stagnant but not failing.
Core Identity	Often altered significantly.	Retains core identity and values.
Objective	Re-establish brand presence from scratch.	Stay relevant and appeal to new consumers.
Effort	High effort, often involves rebranding.	Moderate effort, focuses on modernization.
Target Market	Often shifts to a new market or demographic.	Retains existing market while attracting new ones.

Brand is dying/stagnating

- Reposition the brand
- Refresh the Brand’s Visual Identity
- Product Innovation and Extension
- Leverage Digital Marketing and Social Media
- Target New Markets or Audiences
- Build Emotional Connections Through Purpose-Driven Campaigns
- Improve Product Quality or Experience
- Collaborations and Partnerships
- Adopt Sustainability and CSR Initiatives

Market dying/stagnating

- Market diversification
- Product Innovation
- Repositioning
- Collaboration and partnerships
- Localized strategies